

RUSSIA FACES INTERNAL CRISIS LIBERAL GROWTH

Rival Influences are Now Secretly Engaged.

in Bitter Struggle for Imperial Support—The Liberal Movement is Gaining Strength.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 14.—Russia is facing a great internal crisis which, in the minds of intelligent Russians, overshadows in importance all questions relating to foreign policies. A new, broad and liberal movement seems not only under way, but gaining momentum daily; and the best feature of it is that it is entirely divorced from any radical revolutionary propaganda. Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky, the minister of the interior, has given the movement impetus, but has done so against the most powerful influences, and behind the scenes a bitter struggle is waging for imperial support. During the coming week the first test of strength is likely to occur, the result of which may make much for the history of Russia.

The policy of reaction, which had grown steadily since the accession of Alexander III, seemed suddenly to lose its main bulwark when Minister Plehve fell. With the advent of Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky and his frank appeal for a policy of mutual confidence between government and people, a tremendous liberal reaction occurred, raising, perhaps unjustifiably, high hopes and aspirations.

The Russian policy as regards Finland, if not reversed, has been greatly ameliorated, and the Finnish national diet will meet next month. The oppressive activity of the police throughout the empire has been largely relaxed, banishment by administrative order has been abolished, hundreds of political prisoners exiled to Siberia have been recalled; the Jews have received assurances of the dawning of a brighter day; the doors have been thrown open at two of the biggest trials proceeding in Russia (the Schumamm treason trial and the Jewish trial at Gomel), and the method of treating student demonstrations has been radically changed. Persuasion is being substituted for Cossack charges. But nowhere are the changes so marked as in the matter of the press. After years of the strictest censorship Russian papers suddenly found their voices within the last fortnight, and were remarkably plain-spoken in the discussion of international affairs.

Russian Cruiser Damaged.
Tokyo, Nov. 14.—It is reported that the armored cruiser Gromobol struck a rock and was severely damaged at Vladivostok. It is understood that the accident happened during a trial of the Gromobol after repairs on her had been completed. It is said that she returned to her berth in a sinking condition, surrounded by a fleet of smaller craft, which kept her afloat, and that she was redocked. If the report is true it assures the continuance of inactivity of the Vladivostok squadron.

Minor Engagements.
Tokyo, Nov. 14.—The Manchurian army headquarters telegraphs: "In the direction of the left army the enemy attacked from Latchental Nov. 11, at 12:20 o'clock in the morning. They were repulsed. On Nov. 9 200 infantry and 300 cavalry appeared in the direction of Siaozaia. Our force stationed there repulsed them. The Russians marched to Machuantzu. The Russian losses were 60. Ours were six."

Japanese War Measure.
Tokyo, Nov. 14.—A draft of the war measure which the government plans to submit to the diet, which is to meet on Nov. 28, shows a proposed increase in import duties of $750,000. Divided among a large number of articles, the increase on individual articles is small except in the case of tobacco, glassware, beverages and kerosene. The duties on a number of articles, exclusively of Chinese production, are increased.

DIVIDED

Will be the Maryland Electoral Vote—Seven Democrats and One Republican.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 14.—Maryland's delegation to the electoral college will be split, consisting of one Republican and seven Democrats. The official count of the ballots cast last Tuesday is completed with the exception of Charles and Calvert counties. The result of the official count for these counties may alter the figures slightly, but can not change the general result, as the difference between the highest Republican candidate, excepting the one elected, and the lowest Democrats, is 581 more than the official count in the two uncanvassed counties can change.

No further attempt has been made by friends of the dead man to secure the person of Christian since Dr. Elder, the resident surgeon, drew a revolver and informed the mob that he would kill the first man that crossed the threshold. Tax payers had brought the suit to enjoin the payment of interest on nearly all outstanding city bonds on the ground that they are illegal and also to enjoin the sale of bonds.

YOUNG WEBER UNDER ARREST FOR THE MURDER

Of His Parents, Sister and Brother.

Prisoner Has Nothing to Say to the Police—Latest Theory of Auburn Tragedy.

Auburn, Cal., Nov. 14.—The police authorities here have placed under arrest Adolph Weber, who is charged with the murder of his parents, sister and young brother last Thursday night, and with having set the family residence on fire afterward to conceal the crime. Weber took his arrest very coolly. The arrest took place immediately after he left the witness stand and after he had reluctantly answered the questions propounded to him by Coroner Shepard, the district attorney, and several of the jurymen.

The latest theory in the Weber murder case is that the murderer shot the father first; then, as the sister appeared in the hall, he shot her, and then the mother, seeing what had been done, screamed and started from him when he shot her. She continued on across the room and, raising her left hand, took down the telephone receiver to call for help, at which time she received the second shot, which penetrated the body just under the left arm. The child, being the only one left, the murderer struck him over the head and felled him. The operator at the central telephone office says that the line that the Weber residence is on showed "busy" at about a half hour before the fire was discovered.

Weber's description is said to tally with that of the robber who recently robbed the bank here. It will be recalled that after the daring robbery in the middle of the day the robber drove rapidly down the road leading toward Newcastle for about a half mile and then left the rig and took to the hills. At this time E. S. Palmer went to his home and, being an expert rifle shot, took his rifle with him and went after the robber. Upon reaching the spot where the buggy was abandoned he noticed a man climbing the hill on the opposite side of the road from that which the robber was supposed to have taken. Upon overtaking the man he found him to be Adolph Weber. Julius Weber missed one of his home-made money bags about this time, which tallied very closely with the one used by the man who held up the bank.

DAMAGES

Wanted by a Workman Who Was Injured at Thornville—He Fell 25 Feet.

Lancaster, O., Nov. 14.—Wm. "Monk" Landersfelt who was seriously injured by falling off the M. E. church at Thornville last Saturday, is in the city making arrangements to file action against the contractor, W. W. Bope, for carelessness that resulted in his injury. The case has been placed in the hands of Attorney C. M. Courtwright and the amount asked for will be $10,000. Mr. Landersfelt has been unable to work since the accident and it is doubtful if he will be able to work for several months.

He claims that Mr. Bope had removed the scaffolding that held the scaffold upon which he and his partner, Joseph Wallace, were working upon the roof, had said nothing to either of them about it and that he was responsible for the accident.

The distance he fell by measurement, was 25 feet.

Sisters Die Together.

New York, Nov. 14.—Locked in each other's arms, on the bare floor of a dismantled flat in East Fifty-first street, from which they had been dispossessed on Friday, two sisters, Louise E. and Valerie Attol, 41 and 38 years respectively, were found dead. In the mouth of each was a rubber tube which connected with the chandelier. In the hand of the younger woman was an open letter, written in German, which stated that the sisters had decided to die together after talking the matter over for a week, and requesting that they be buried in one grave. "For this consideration," the letter continued, "we give our bodies for the benefit of medical science."

Tourmaline Stones.

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—A collection of tourmaline, precious stones, valued at $15,000, was added to the state mining bureau's exhibit of California specimens. The stones come from Mesa Grande, San Diego county, where the discovery of it created much excitement. It is claimed the collection sent to San Francisco is the most valuable ever gotten together, there being specimens of every known color and shade, and all of them of bright luster. The stone cut retails at $25 to $50 per carat, and New York jewelers are taking all they can get, as there is a fad for the jewel in fashionable New York circles.

IN JAIL

The Jacksons Driven by Cold and Hunger to Surrender.

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 14.—The brothers, Ed and George Jackson, of Montgomery, for whom rewards have been offered by both state and county authorities, have surrendered and are now in the county jail at Charleston. The men had been sequestered in an abandoned coal mine just outside Montgomery, and were driven to surrender by hunger and cold. The officials took the men around the town of Montgomery and by a roundabout way brought the prisoners to Charleston to avoid a riot or lynching, which would have evidently occurred had the citizens of Montgomery discovered that the Jackson brothers had been apprehended. The men are charged with the killing of Sheriff Daniels and John Relf, a prominent citizen of Montgomery.

LABOR

CONVENTION OPENED MONDAY AT SAN FRANCISCO.

Never Before Has a More Serious Line of Work Been Cut Out for the Delegates.

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—The annual convention of the American Federation of Labor opened today with a good attendance. Delegates were present representing approximately 16,000 voters and about 2,000,000 workers. Never before in the history of the organization has a more serious line of labor been cut out for it, and the delegates are determined to devise ways and means and outline policies calculated to squarely meet the various situations. Important questions to be considered include the open shop. Delegates feel the federation is strong enough to cope with employee associations in the matter. Gompers will be opposed for reelection by Vice President Duncan. With both sides lined up forces are confident. The question of supporting political questions in favor of labor legislation and exclusion of Japanese are to be taken up. A big parade preceded the opening of the convention. The meeting is expected to last two weeks.

WATSON

Gives Out a Statement of His Plans for Organization of the People.

New York, Nov. 14.—Thomas B. Watson, late Populist candidate for president, gave out the following statement: "Mr. Roosevelt's majority over Mr. Parker was due mainly to two things: one was the immense personal popularity of Mr. Roosevelt himself, and the other was the immense unpopularity of Mr. Cleveland's second administration. My own plans for the future embrace a complete organization of the people along the lines of those of Jeffersonian democracy, the re-establishment of reform papers, and a systematic propaganda of Jeffersonian principles in order that in 1908 there shall be a party of genuine opposition to the Republican party and its present policies. Mr. Bryan has no more right at the present time to say what the Democratic platform shall be in 1908 than any other distinguished Democrat. For the next four years the Democratic creed must remain what the St. Louis convention of 1904 made it, and the machinery of the party must remain in the hands of the men who now hold it."

RICH MAN'S WIFE

The rig was never recovered and trace of the woman, despite vigorous search, was not secured until Sunday. ## EASTERN CITIES WERE CUT OFF BY BIG STORM

Atlantic Coast Visited by Stiff Gale.

Washington Snowbound and New York Cut Off by Fierce Storm—Two Wires Paralyzed.

New York, Nov. 14.—Not since 1887 has communication between New York and the balance of the country been in such a condition of collapse as today. Barring the operation of a few telephone wires to Baltimore and Philadelphia the wire service is completely knocked out by Sunday's terrific storm. The damage to wires is the most serious the telegraph companies have met in many years. It is spread over a wide area. Repair gangs were hurriedly started out last night by special trains over all the railroad lines, north, west and south. The damage about New York to the wires is the worst in history. No wires are left north of Baltimore nor between Philadelphia and Harrisburg. Much trouble also exists south of Washington, where the storm first appeared. Owing to the width of the storm's path much delay to railway traffic is anticipated, as the telegraph largely controls the movements of trains. Buffalo is not seriously affected.

A volunteer crew of the harbor police, after one of the most desperate attempts at rescue in the history of the department, brought ashore eleven men from the ferryboat Port Morris, which was driven aground and wrecked on the rocks off College Point last night. The ferryboat ran into a snow and sleet storm of such violence as absolutely to shut out the shore lights. The heavy sea forced the craft on the rocks in such a position that it was plain she would soon go to pieces. The signals of distress were answered by the Edson, of the health department, which was forced to put back to avoid disaster. The steamer Patrol tried to reach Port Morris five times ineffectually and then put back to the New York shore. The captain called for volunteers to man a lifeboat and try to take a line to the ferry. Meantime a launch from the Edson ran under stern of the Port Morris and took off eleven passengers, the crews declining to leave the craft while there was a chance to save her. The launch attempted to make shore but could not secure any headway against the wind and was filling when the harbor Patrol lifeboat, manned by six policemen, reached her and took off all hands. The launch was abandoned.

Three prisoners confined on the island in East river for petty offenses, are thought to have lost their lives in the storm on Sunday. They were "trusties" and had rowed a party of visitors back to the city. On the return trip the boat was caught in the high seas, which swept them out of sight.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 14.—A snow, wind and rain storm caused an almost complete prostration of electric light, telegraph, telephone, and trolley cars. A number of accidents were occasioned by the heavily charged wires, but so far as known there have been no fatalities. With the exception of a few Western Union wires to Philadelphia and New York, Baltimore is cut off from communication with the other points of the country. The local weather observer sent out a warning to masters of vessels to the effect that a second storm is fast traveling up the Atlantic coast.

Washington Snowbound.
Washington, Nov. 14.—As the result of a snowstorm Washington for several hours was completely cut off from telegraphic and telephone communication with the outside world. Both the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph companies reported severe damage to their wires and their inability to get any messages through. Inquiry at the railway stations developed the fact that trains were departing on schedule time, but that incoming trains were three or more hours late.

Crew Missing.
Wood's Hole, Mass., Nov. 14.—The two masted schooner Earle, Captain Nason, of Rockland, Me., went ashore in a severe northeast gale about three-quarters of a mile east of Tarpanin Cove, on the island of Nantuxet. The seas are breaking over the craft mast-head high. No trace of the crew has been found, and fears are entertained for their safety. The vessel is in a particularly exposed condition and the chances of her being saved are slight.

New York Cut Off.
New York, Nov. 14.—New York was entirely cut off for four hours from the south and west by a fierce hurricane, accompanied by rain and snow, which is sweeping the Atlantic seaboard. The storm of wind and rain has come up the coast with almost cyclonic speed. It was central off Cape Hatteras, although its force was felt far to the northward.

BATTLE

With Cattle Thieves—One Outlaw Is Dead and Another Jailed Mortally Wounded.

Salt Lake City, Nov. 14.—One outlaw is dead and another is in jail mortally wounded as the result of a desperate battle between cattle thieves and officers near Death, Nev. Sheriff Clarke and deputy of Elko county caught Jim McKelvey and Charles Winslow in the act of skinning a steer of the Graham brand. When called upon to surrender they dropped behind the carcass of the animal and began firing at the officers. The latter sought shelter, and for 20 minutes a duel continued. Finally McKelvey sprang to his feet and fired. The shot was returned and McKelvey fell dead. A few minutes later Winslow surrendered and was found to be mortally wounded. He was placed in jail at Elko.

RIOTING

In Streets of Rio Janeiro—Scores of People are Killed or Wounded in the Fighting.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 14.—The opposition to the compulsory vaccination led to fierce rioting. The demonstration had every characteristic of a revolution. A dozen people, it is reported, were killed, and 60 were injured. An intermittent fusillade continues.

MOTHER

OF THEODORE BINDER, FAMOUS VIOLINIST, IS DEAD.

The End Came at Her Late Home on North Fifth Street Early Sunday Morning.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Binder, aged 81 years, died at her home, 69 North Fifth street at 4 o'clock Sunday morning after an illness of 18 days with heart trouble.

Mrs. Binder was the mother of Theodore Binder, one of the most famous young violinists of the last century. His reputation was international and his rendition of the most difficult concertos, followed by the playing of "Way Down Upon the Swannee River" or "Home, Sweet Home," was an encore many a time brought him the enthusiastic accord of thousands in Chicago, Boston, and other American cities.

Theodore Binder was also well known in Newark, and it was his pride and delight to give to Newark audiences the very best in his repertoire. Every person in this city who follows music, remembers the exquisite taste and wonderful technique of this master of the greatest of musical instruments.

His mother was born in Lubbecke, Prussia, in 1835, and came to Newark with her husband about 59 years ago. She lived at the home where she died for over 30 years, and was always honored and esteemed by the neighbors and all those who knew her. She was a consistent member of the German Lutheran church and her life was a daily exemplification of the Christian religion which she professed. She leaves a husband, Valentine Binder of Columbus, and two daughters, Mrs. Frank P. Connell and Miss Louise C. Binder, both of Newark.

The funeral will take place from the home at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. It is the earnest wish of the family that the friends of the deceased will attend, but outside of such the services are private. Rev. Michael Schleifer and Rev. J. C. Schindel will conduct the services, and the interment will be made in Cedar Hill cemetery.

Gun Factory Overworked.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Lack of officers for ordnance duty and the overtaxing of the naval gun factory at Washington continue to be the two most serious problems facing the bureau of ordnance, according to the annual report of Rear Admiral Newton E. Mason, chief of ordnance, just approved by Secretary Morton. The report says a plan for reorganization of the work of the bureau will be submitted later, with a view to increasing the supply of ordnance experts.

HORSE MAD

FARMER AND SON ARE KNOCKED DOWN AND INJURED.

Jaw Broken With Fence Rail in Fight. Charles Kessler Arrested for the Assault.

Lancaster, O., Nov. 14.—A farmer named Samuel Keister, residing on the Pleasantville pike, three miles from this city and his little seven year old son, were considerably injured and had a narrow escape from being killed by a black driving horse of Keister's, while frenzied from an attack of rabies. The animal first attacked the stock on the place and when the young lad went near the barnyard fence the animal knocked him down. When Keister ran to the assistance of the boy the horse, with foam streaming from his mouth, attacked the farmer, knocking him down and only after a hard battle did he succeed in getting away.

Keister ran into the house with his hand streaming with blood presumably from a bite by the crazed beast, and quickly returning with a gun, shot and killed the mad horse.

A veterinary surgeon, who was called to examine the horse pronounced it a well developed case of rabies. Keister promptly secured medical treatment for his injured hand.

As the result of a fight in which Samuel Born received a badly broken lower jaw Charles Kessler has been arrested upon the charge of assault and battery preferred by the former's brother, Henry P. Born. It appears that both parties to the mixup had been drinking. Kessler says Born came at him with a knife, and that he struck Born with a fence rail in self defense.

The blow broke Born's lower jaw almost at the point of the chin and Dr. J. J. Stuckey took the man to the Ohio Medical university in Columbus on Tuesday, where the jaw was set. Clamps were put on the rear molars of the lower jaw, and a strong wire arch fastened to these teeth. The teeth wired to this arch and the jaw held firmly in position. It will be four weeks before the arch can be removed.

Kessler pleaded not guilty to the charge and the trial occupied the attention of the court Saturday.

There will be a general curiosity to see what will happen to Senator Smoot, now that the election is over. Utah gave its vote to Roosevelt, and so did Idaho and Wyoming, where the Mormons are strong. It was charged that this was to be done with the understanding that Smoot was to be permitted to retain his seat in the Senate, where there was some prospect that his vote might be needed. But now it is known that the Republican majority in the Senate will not need Mr. Smoot's vote for any political reason. Hence it remains a matter of curiosity as to what the Republicans will do with their Mormon apostle.

Some of the ships of the Baltic fleet have stopped at Crete, where it is said they will remain for some time for repairs. The selection of the island for a stopping place was made with discretion. It nominally belongs to Turkey, but is really under the protection of the great powers, which named Prince George of Greece as the governor. There will be a lot of circumlocution before all the parties interested in the island can make any protest against assistance being given to the Russian ships, and the Sultan is not likely to be in any hurry over the matter. Thus the Russians will probably have all the time they want. The rest of the fleet will have to time their progress in accordance with the movements of the ships now at Crete. From the island the next stage of the voyage will be to the entrance of the Suez canal, the passage of which will require some time. The Russians are said to fear attacks from the Japanese in the Red Sea, and perhaps not without reason. At the present rate of progress it will be the middle of January before the fleet reaches Japanese waters.

E. Stuart, representative of the International Correspondence Schools of Scranton, Pa., will be at the Hotel Ludlow every Monday evening from 6:30 o'clock to 9:30 o'clock. Call and see him. 11-9m-w-s12t

Scrofula

It is commonly inherited. Few are entirely free from it. Pale, weak, puny children are afflicted with it in nine cases out of ten, and many adults suffer from it.

Common indications are bunches in the neck, abscesses, cutaneous eruptions, inflamed eyelids, sore ears, rickets, catarrh, wasting, and general debility.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Eradicate it, positively and absolutely. This statement is based on the thousands of permanent cures these medicines have wrought.

"My daughter had scrofula, with eleven sores on her neck and about her ears. Hood's Sarsaparilla was highly recommended and she took it and was cured. She is now in good health." Mrs. J. H. Jones, Parker City, Ind.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

Belligerents and Neutrals at Sea.

There are so many knots in the neutrality laws, which are rather a set of customs and precedents than a code of specific enactments, that every warship captain would need an international jurist at his elbow if he would avoid infringing upon the rights of neutrals in every emergency. For instance, it is a rule that a belligerent shall not attack the enemy on neutral waters. But sometimes it is extremely difficult to determine just what constitutes an attack in the meaning of that ruling.

It has been held that where two vessels are sailing in company and one of them attacks a neutral vessel, the other is entitled to neutral waters the other may follow up and continue the fight—virtually make attack—under the plea of pressing necessity. A vessel so fleeing from an opponent after showing fight confesses to defeat, and the victor is entitled to his prize. Some interesting points were raised by the action of the neutral yacht Deerhound during the famous Kearsarge-Alabama fight. The Alabama formally surrendered to the Kearsarge and, being in a sinking condition, was abandoned by her officers and crew. The Confederate commander, Captain Raphael Semmes, twelve of his officers and some sailors were picked up by the Deerhound, sailing under the English flag. Captain Semmes said to the owner of the yacht, "I am now under English colors, and the sooner you put me, with my officers and men, upon English soil the better." The Deerhound at once steamed away for Southampton. The underofficers of the Kearsarge appealed to their commander, Captain Winslow, to be allowed to fire a shot at the Deerhound to bring her to, but he declined because he believed that the yacht was simply taking sea room "to come around" and deliver up the Confederates.

The rule is that a neutral ship has no right to rescue the drowning sailors of a belligerent, but it happened in this case that Captain Winslow asked the Deerhound to save the Alabama people from drowning. Having taken them on board by Federal authority, it would have been a breach of neutrality toward the Confederate government for the yacht to surrender them. Had the Kearsarge attempted recapture this act would have constituted a double breach of neutrality—first, in attacking an enemy on neutral territory; second, firing upon a neutral flag. Captain Winslow's instincts were chivalric, but his technical judgment was in error and robbed him of the best fruits of his victory. The United States demanded the surrender of the Confederates, but England firmly refused for the reasons above stated.

A New World's Map.

The geographers are seeking government aid in the execution of a general map of America on a scale of one mile to a million. Similar maps of Asia and Africa are now in the course of preparation by the governments of France, Germany and England. All nations are expected to co-operate in preparing a similar and uniform map of the whole world. In this age of history making the political features of geography are constantly changing, but the physical features are permanent. Indications are that there will be events happening for years to come in the region lying between Siberia on the north and Afghanistan on the south, and the reading public would appreciate a map with the mountains, rivers, principal towns and roads accurately laid down. The proposed new general map cannot come too soon, especially if it proves comprehensive and thorough.

In view of the possibility that England may need a vast army in the far east, the Canadians are considering the advantages of their transcontinental line, which comprises a rail route from Halifax to the Pacific coast. The Intercolonial railway from Halifax to Montreal and the Canadian Pacific from Montreal to Vancouver together afford a continuous line less than 4,000 miles long and shorter by over 1,000 miles than the Transiberian from Moscow to Harbin. The Canadian lines claim that they could put through 30,000 troops in a week; hence, with fast ships, England could rush soldiers to the Asiatic coast at the rate of over 100,000 a month.

The lesson conveyed by the rise and fall of that gigantic get rich quick concern, the United States Shipbuilding company, is again emphasized by the sale of the assets for little more than 5 per cent of their "marked price" when offered to the public. Concerns capitalized at $67,000,000 in the new company were knocked down at $3,655,000. Investors in those securities may expect very little money back.

The battles on the river Sha had the effect of sending up Japanese securities in London, while Russian securities fell off in both London and Paris. Formerly the financiers of Europe were unmoved by Japanese victories and the securities of the mikado's empire steadily declined.

The prediction comes from Wall street that the United States will soon consume all the wheat it can raise. When that day arrives the farmer will realize something near the price which the consumer pays for his products.

RECEIVER REPORTS

Recommending Payment of a 40 Per Cent Dividend --Large Amount of Assets Still Uncollected, Many Being in Process of Collection.

Receiver A. A. Stasel of the Newark Savings Bank filed his report with the clerk of court Monday morning. Mr. Stasel's complete report follows: I took charge of the assets of the Newark Savings Bank company upon my appointment and qualification by this court and proceeded to review the work done by Mr. G. V. Tafel, the former receiver, and check up his books, and collections and disbursements made by him, and found the work done to be so far as it went correct and found the actual cash on hand to correspond with the collections made.

In each instance, when I did not approve his work, I set it aside, and where I approved his work, I accepted the same, and to avoid complications I report herewith all work done, without respect to the change of receivers.

As shown by the report I have collected the sum of $104,446.12, of this sum $15,615.50 was allowed on offset claims against the bank as shown by "Schedule H" of this report.

In each instance where a person owed the bank and also held a claim against the bank in their own personal right and when such claims and indebtedness existed prior to the appointment of the receiver, and was such a mutual demand as could be offset as between the bank and the party owing, I have allowed an offset and settled with such person, subject however, to the approval of this court when the same should be reported.

Such offsets aggregate the amount above stated.

I also paid out in actual cash, accepting the former receiver's payments, as per "Schedule M" of this report, the sum of $215,29, the large item of this amount of expense was on account of J. Hope Sutor, an expert accountant employed by Mr. W. J. Tafel and continued by me, who received the remuneration of $10.00 per day. This is the customary wage paid for such service.

The work done by this accountant was well done and was a valuable and necessary work on account of the chaotic condition of the books and papers of the bank.

Upon the result of this work I have been enabled to ascertain the amount with accuracy due and payable upon the bond of Mr. Linsefelter, and have accordingly brought suit upon that instrument, for the sum of $50,000.00.

Also many details of this business have been cleared up by this investigation and apparent liabilities of the bank cleared away.

In all it has been a profitable investment of money.

This expense was stopped as soon as your receiver thought proper.

All other expenses enumerated in this schedule are such as ordinarily necessary and are reasonable in price.

Your receiver also expended $110.00 as shown by "Schedule M" in advance costs in the United States court.

TONIGHT—When the Bell Tolls. . . NOV. 16—Down on the Farm.
FRIDAY NIGHT—Wang. . . NOV. 22—Roanoke.
NOV. 29—Li and Jane.

WHEN THE BELL TOLLS.

A great many people labor under the delusion that a melodrama is a play that must be full of "blood and thunder" before it can be designated by that title. This is a mistake. A melodrama is a drama in which music plays an important figure and adds much to the beauty of certain scenes. In "When the Bell Tolls" there is an absence of sensationalism, and its place is supplied by a romantic story, full of heart throbs and intense interest. The field that the playwright has entered is a novel one, and around the historic and quaint picturesque walls of the monastery of St. Bernard's located the charming play "When the Bell Tolls." At the Auditorium tonight.

THE BEAUTY FINDERS.

Augusta Daly possessed a faculty for discovering and schooling tragic actresses; David Belasco is a genius in sons; Jessie Matvey, whose voice and beauty attracted admirers in two continents, and Marguerite Clark the dainty little singer whose Matava in Mr. Hopper's present production, "Wang," made her famous in a night, and Shubert—she gave us Julia Sanderson, and a too-long-for-publication list of other noted beauties that twinkle in his theateric army. One of the celebrities here mentioned, Marguerite Clark, will be seen here next Friday night at the appearance of De Wolf Hopper at the Auditorium when we are to have the now famous Lyric theatre revival of the Hopper masterpiece, "Wang."

LI AND JANE.

One continual round of pleasure in "Li and Jane." You laugh, yell, scream, roar. If you cry, well the laugh is on you. Are you going? Beatrice Push one of your school mates of only a few years ago plays the part of "Jane." Auditorium, Nov. 29.

DOWN ON THE FARM.

Charles Hauley supported by an excellent company will present the beautiful farm play "Down on the Farm," at the Auditorium on next Wednesday evening, November 16. Seats will be placed on sale at the box office tomorrow (Tuesday) morning at 8:30. Prices 25, 25 and 50 cents. Don't miss the greatest of Rube hands.

ROANOKE.

finding and developing emotional women of the stage; De Wolf Hopper is responsible for the majority of our famous light opera favorites and Sam S. Shubert is no doubt the peer of preparateurs of musical comedy girls. Daly gave us Fanny Davenport, Ada Renna, Clara Morris and Maxine Elliott, and other queens of heavy drama; Belasco brought out Mrs. Carter, Blanche Bates and half a dozen lesser lights of the emotional plays. Hopper found Della Fox, who became the highest salaried singing soubrette in America; Elmo Wallace Hopper, who shared honors with her discoverer for several seasons; Jessie Matvey, whose voice and beauty attracted admirers in two continents, and Marguerite Clark the dainty little singer whose Matava in Mr. Hopper's present production, "Wang," made her famous in a night, and Shubert—she gave us Julia Sanderson, and a too-long-for-publication list of other noted beauties that twinkle in his theateric army. One of the celebrities here mentioned, Marguerite Clark, will be seen here next Friday night at the appearance of De Wolf Hopper at the Auditorium when we are to have the now famous Lyric theatre revival of the Hopper masterpiece, "Wang."

Although there has been a very large sale of season tickets there are yet a number of excellent seats left. The board will be kept open for season reserves until Wednesday morning. After that those who wish to reserve seats for the first entertainment can do so.

where in I commenced an action in involuntary bankruptcy against J. F. Linsefelter and Mary J. Linsefelter. This proceeding was brought on account of a mortgage given by these persons to the Homestead Building & Savings company covering all their property, which mortgage I regarded in law a preference of creditors in view of the amounts owing the Newark Savings Bank company by each of the said Linsefelters.

And I seek by said proceeding to obtain a portion of the said property to apply upon the amount due me, as receiver, from them.

Over and above the claims offset as aforesaid, claims have been presented in the amount of $212,788.56, as shown by "Schedules H, I, J, K, and L."

Upon these claims interest has been computed to November 20th, 1904, the possible date of the payment of a dividend.

The amount of claims presented, $212,788.56, and the amount of cash on hand, $86,694.12, will justify a dividend of 40 per cent, which amount of dividend your receiver recommends for allowance.

Your receiver has rejected claims as shown by that item in "Schedule N." The facts, in my judgment, not justifying their allowance and payment.

Your receiver has rejected the claims of offsets as itemized in "Schedule N."

In the first eight items of which an offset was claimed against my claim as receiver of the amount due on unpaid stock subscription, it is my opinion that the stock subscription must be paid in full, because this offset could not have been claimed or allowed by the bank prior to the receivership, the unpaid stock subscription not having been due or payable until that time and also because it is a trust-fund for creditors, like unto the double liability of stockholders.

Other offsets rejected were so rejected because the claim against the bank was not made and could not be made as of personal right by the party claiming the same. Such claims being due from the bank to such persons in a trust capacity whereas the debts due the bank were due from such persons in their proper person.

In the matter of New York drafts, these are claimed by the persons presenting them in full of the amount due. See "Schedule K."

They aggregate the sum of $1,580.53 and were all drawn upon the Hanover National Bank of New York. In this bank when the receiver took charge, there was to the credit of the Newark Savings company the sum of $865.69.

These claims have all been allowed as general claims and not in full. And if such claims are allowed in full it can only be in full of the fund on which such drafts are drawn and they would share ratably in that fund.

There is yet a large amount of assets uncollected which are collectable. The amount of these I cannot now state or ascertain, but they are of a considerable amount, and a large number are now in process of collection in the courts.

Your receiver says this report and the several schedules hereto attached and made part hereof are a just and true statement of the condition of the said Newark Savings Bank company, and the same contains a true and correct statement of the conduct and work of your receiver in the premises, and your receiver asks a confirmation of this report.

It may be well to say in connection with this report that this dividend will be paid as soon as the court confirms the report and orders the payment of the dividend. The time will depend upon whether or not any exceptions are filed to the report. If not, the dividend will be paid soon, and due notice will be given of the payment through the Advocate.

WITLESS WILES

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

Copyright, 1904, by Martha McCulloch-Williams

Harrowby town held its breath, watching the encounter of the Carrs and the Phillipses. Superficially, it was a comedy; potentially, a tragedy. After hotly ignoring each other for thirty years, the rival houses were at last forced to take intimate cognizance of each other.

It came about naturally enough. John Carr and Luke Phillips, the present heads of the families, had been in college days the chosen friends of Billy Bluff, who now, as the famous Senator Bluff, was in Harrowby on purpose to visit them. A great card was the senator. Neither of the enemies could afford to give him up wholly to the other. As he knew nothing of the unkindness, they did not choose to enlighten him. Contravise, they made tacit and temporary truce, speaking civilly to each other in his presence and even sitting at each other's boards to do him cordial honor.

This was less awkward than it might have been, since there had never been a violent breach—only a drawing away and looking to the other side of the street or over heads in casual encounters.

The quarrel was over the choice of a minister, and, of course, all the bitterness for that. The Carrs had been worsted, and, though they still came to St. Michael's and duly supported all its good works, they took no part in anything else. Therefore everybody felt that their grudge was the greatest. Luke Phillips pretty well ran the ministers and quite ran the church.

A masterful man, with a daughter of his own stripe, he could not very well help it. Oriana, the daughter, was indeed so much a chip off the old block her fine name made part of the comedy. She was twenty-five, tall and stout, with dark eyes and a fine carriage, to say nothing of the way she wore her clothes. Almost every Sunday her fingers fairly itched to get hold of Louise Carr's ribbons.

Louise was the younger by five years, sweet faced and sunny tempered, but woefully careless as to how she looked. So she had clean clothes and whole it never bothered her in the least what else they were or were not. She certainly did look odd in plain coat sleeves when every other woman in church had dangling, baggy puffs and frills all over her arms.

Perhaps if he had not seen her first in a party frock with no sleeves to speak of Senator Bluff might not have given her a second thought. He was a bachelor and as rich as he was distinguished. Gossip hinted, too, that he was looking for a wife. Gossip said also in a way not to be gainsaid he would look a long time before finding anybody better suited to the position than Oriana.

Oriana herself was quite of that opinion, although of course she kept it unspoken. Senator Bluff was certainly impressed at their first meeting. He insisted upon putting up at the hotel, although dining or breakfasting every day with his old college chums. Louise was away at her grandmother's when he came. Thus for a whole week Oriana had a clear field.

Then the Grays gave a party, and Louise danced at it, a slim white wraith moving on winged feet, with yellow hair tumbling all about her rosy face and every fiber vibrant with joy in the music and the rhythmic motion.

Until he saw her Senator Bluff had said staidly that his dancing days were over. At fifty one might well leave such things to the new generation. Judge then Oriana's wrath when she saw him waltzing with Louise and waltzing extremely well, looking full in his partner's face the while and smiling as he had not smiled since he came to Harrowby.

Next day it was even worse. The senator breakfasted at the Carrs and immediately afterward took Louise and her mother for a long vagrant drive about the country. Capping the climax, he brought them along with him to dine at the Phillips house, saying airily to Oriana, who was mistress of it: "You see, I take your father at his word. He said the house was mine while I stayed."

"You did quite right," Oriana said sweetly, reassured by a glance at Louise. The girl had on a faded blue gingham two years out of date, and her hair was positively stringy. No doubt the senator thought of her as only a little girl in the awkward age, hence in need of special consideration. No man in his senses would look at her in comparison with Oriana, a stately vision in canary yellow gauze, with dark red roses nodding against her bare breast and nestled amid the darkness of her hair.

Louise gazed at her ironically. "You are always splendid, Miss 'Anna. To-night you are a queen," she said, then went to dinner, quite unconscious of her own ruffled appearance.

She had smoothed her hair a bit and stuck a spray of sweet peas in the low coil so the flowers drooped against her soft, white neck. Young Luke Phillips, who took her out, looked at her and patronizingly decided that she was a dowdy. Before dinner ended he changed his mind. Senator Bluff managed somehow to set Louise telling stories and acting them. She had the rare and heavenly gift of losing herself entirely in whatever she did. So, utterly neglecting her plate, she was by turns the minister's wife making a pseudo pastoral visit, her grandmother's companion, French Peter at the tollgate or Miss Jane Sowell, the milliner, with Harrowby's hats on her conscience.

In vain her mother frowned, sighed, tried to stop her. A creature of whim and impulse, Louise would not be stayed. As a consequence Luke junior went back to the parlor pretty well enslaved. Oriana saw it with rejoicing, although a fortnight back she would have been deadly angry.

She was clear-sighted. She had lost the senator beyond peradventure unless she could make him believe Louise was not free. That was a trifle hazardous, but she was ready for hazards. So, while Louise sang in a sweet, untrained voice the few trite songs she knew, Oriana tried her charms. Gently of course! She fairly purred in Senator Bluff's ear her joy that the family feud, at which she barely hinted, was to be so beautifully healed. It was a secret as yet, but Luke would establish himself in another year; he was fresh from college, being Oriana's junior. Wouldn't the senator come back next summer for the wedding? She hoped so, most devoutly. Louise was such a dear, the Phillipses did not in the least mind that she would bring her husband only herself.

Sensor Bluff was genial, but evasive. He also was clear sighted. By something approaching intuition he had looked into Louise's heart and found its deeps untroubled, untempered. But he was not very sorry for what Oriana had said. It gave him exactly the opening he was longing for. So the next day, as he stood with Louise beside the raspberry thicket, helping her pick berries for lunch, he said offhandedly: "Say, ladybird, if you want to get married, don't worry yourself over ways and means. I'll tend to all that!"

"Indeed!" Louise said, with a wicked smile. "You're taking a big contract, senator. You'll have to provide everything—from the bridal veil to the bridegroom. Have you a constituent yearning to sacrifice himself on your altar?"

"Not that I know of," the senator said, laughing. "It's my constituents who have a representative after that job. Tell me, honor bright, do you care for Luke Phillips?"

"I wouldn't have him as a gracious gift," Louise burst out.

Sensor Bluff smiled—almost as wickedly as she had done.

"In that case," he said, "since I have undertaken to marry you off, I'll have to take you myself."

Louise said "Indeed!" again, but with a different infection.

The wedding came off in a fortnight. None of the Phillipses were there—they had each and severally suddenly discovered that their constitutions demanded mountain air.

The Mechanical Harvester.

When dawn is red over the California wheatfields, says Everybody's Magazine, a leviathan comes lumbering down the road, shooting out heavy clouds of smoke, and falls to attacking the grain. This machine, heavy as a church and complicated as a watch, is a mechanical marvel. Before goes a lumbering engine with a heavy stack and a fire box that vomits out dense flames from a hot petroleum fire. Behind it is all levers and big pillars and curious devices of steel. It works with the complex accuracy of a human being. The sickle buzzes, and the heads from a twenty foot swath fall smoothly on a canvas bed. You catch glimpses of them rushing here and there through the complex mechanism, and presently a laborer who has been very busy with some sacks jerks down a lever. Bump! Out tumble four fat bags of wheat. At the other end a man with a shovel works like mad clearing away a pile of chaff and short, crumpled straw. This is all that the ignorant observer sees. Only the engineer can tell you how the grain which stood in proud array a minute before is now ready for mill—a month's work in five minutes.

The King's Cock Crowing.

"The king's cock crower" was a quaint old English institution not abolished until the reign of George I. During the season of Lent the officer known officially as the "king's cock crower" crowed the hour every night within the precincts of the palace instead of proclaiming it in the ordinary manner. On the first Ash Wednesday after the accession of the house of Hanover, as the Prince of Wales, afterward George II., was sitting down to supper, this officer suddenly entered the apartment and proclaimed in a sound resembling the crowing of a cock that it was past 10 o'clock. Taken thus by surprise and very imperfectly acquainted with the English language, the prince mistook the crow for an insult and rose instantly to resent the affront, nor was it without the utmost difficulty that his interpreter could make him understand the nature of the custom and assure him that a compliment was intended according to the court etiquette of the times. From that period, however, the custom was discontinued.

The First English Newspaper.

The earliest English newspapers were not printed, but simply written. For the benefit of those who wished to consult them they were exhibited in a public place, each reader being called upon to pay a small coin called a gazette; hence the word "gazette." The earliest English newspaper was the Weekly News, first published in 1622. In the seventeenth century several newspapers were established, and in the eighteenth century we had the famous Spectator and allied publications of the sort. The first daily appeared in 1792. It is also interesting to note that the first serial story was "Robinson Crusoe," which began to run in the London Post on Oct. 7, 1719, and concluded on Oct. 19, 1720.

THE HALL OF FAME.

Andrew Carnegie has written a little book on James Watt, the great engineer. Yin Hsing Wen and Sing Chai Chou, government students from China, have entered the Virginia Military Institute. Anatole France and Octave Mirbeau have declared they will never have anything more to do with the French academy.

Grigham K. Mellen, son of President Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, is a stenographer in the employ of the company. Major R. W. McLaughry, warden of the United States penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., has just celebrated the completion of his thirtieth year in that office.

Dr. Leo Vogel, secretary of the Swiss legation at Berlin, who has been appointed Swiss minister at Washington, will be the youngest diplomat of his rank at the American capital.

A committee has been formed in England to establish a permanent memorial to Sir Edwin Arnold. It includes such men as Joseph Chamberlain, Rudyard Kipling and the Japanese minister among its members.

The Rev. Wilson S. Fritch of Attleboro, Mass., has fully decided to go on the dramatic stage. He has resigned as pastor of the Pilgrim church and will make his first appearance in "Hamlet."

Mr. Gully, who has entered his seventieth year, will probably retire from the speakership of the house of commons before another birthday comes around as a viscount and with a pension of £2,000 per annum.

Perhaps the most remarkable old man in the world is stationed at Fort St. George, Calcutta, India. His name is Salkah Imanudda, regimental chaplain to the Eighteenth Native Bengal infantry. He is 130 years old and still reads without spectacles.

ANIMAL TALES.

B. B. Holmes of Fall River, Mass., is the owner of a foxhound six months old whose ears measure eighteen and a half inches from tip to tip.

W. C. Goss of Henniker, N. H., recently shot a fishhawk that measured five feet ten inches from tip to tip of wings. The bird was carrying a sucker in his talons twenty inches long.

A curious find was made while a fare of codfish was being dressed from the schooner George Willard at Newburyport. It was a pint bottle, corked, in a cod's stomach. In the bottle was about a teaspoonful of whisky.

A man eating shark gave a hard battle to a fisherman named Merchant in Salem harbor. He bit at a cod line, and he came up on it ready for a fight. The fisherman fought the shark with his gaff, and the fish bit off a piece of his hardwood handle as if it had been straw. The fish was four feet in length.

Professor Alfred Giard of the sea fishery commission has come to the defense of the oryster. He says that not only does it not transmit the bacillus of typhoid, but that, despite the popular superstition about the months with which the bivalve can be eaten at any season of the year.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL'S VISIT.

Jewish Author and Playwright and His Mission Here.

Israel Zangwill, the famous Jewish author and playwright, who recently arrived from London, on a visit to the United States, is an ardent advocate of the plan to colonize the people of his race in eastern Africa. It is partly to further this idea that he is making his present visit to America. While here he is to put some finishing touches on a new play now being rehearsed. Mr. Zangwill was born in London forty years ago. He received some rudimentary education at elementary school, but he was not a student of any college. He has written novels, essays, poems and plays, having won especial success as novelist and dramatist. He has also attained popularity as a lecturer. On his visit to America Mr.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

Zangwill is accompanied by his bride, who was Miss Edith Ayton, daughter of Professor Ayton, a London scientist. She is also an author.

Mr. Zangwill is famous for his apt retorts. It is reported that once at a reception he met a Chicago woman who prided herself on being a wit. She fired at him the query, "Mr. Zangwill, do you like pigs' feet?"

"People who overheard the question blushed at the woman's nerve and awaited the author's reply. Mr. Zangwill bit his lip and adjusted his glasses as if pondering the sanity of his questioner and then replied, 'Not particularly, madam, but I like pigs' feet better than I like tongue.'"

AN EMPEROR'S GIFT.

Statue of Frederick the Great Which Is to Be Unveiled Soon.

The statue of Frederick the Great, the personal gift of Emperor William of Germany to the United States, has arrived in this country and is now being set upon the pedestal prepared for it on the esplanade of the Army War College at Washington. The ceremony of unveiling will take place on Nov. 19.

About six years ago one of Germany's foremost sculptors, Professor Ullman, made a marble statue of Frederick the Great, which was erected in the Avenue of Victories in Potsdam. Emperor William's present to the United States is a bronze replica of this statue.

THE STATUE OF FREDERICK THE GREAT.

ed States is a bronze replica of this statue. It is of heroic size, being seven feet in height.

At the unveiling ceremony Bishop Henry J. Slocum of Washington will offer prayer, and this will be followed by an address in presentation of the gift by the German ambassador, Baron von Sternburg. President Roosevelt will make an address, and an oration eulogistic of Frederick the Great will be delivered by Major General George L. Gillespie of the regular army, who, in closing, will introduce the American flag of the German Ambassador, Baroness von Sternburg. They will unwind the German and American flags screening the statue from view.

Frederick II. of Prussia, best known as Frederick the Great, was born Jan. 21, 1712, and died Aug. 17, 1756. He left to his successor a kingdom increased by more than 20,000 square miles, with 70,000,000 Prussian dollars in the treasury, an army of 200,000 men, great credit with all the powers of Europe and a state distinguished for industry, wealth and the encouragement given to science and learning.

THE PLANET MARS.

What We Know About Its Physical and Climatic Conditions. We can draw all the geographical configurations, seas, coasts, islands, peninsulas, mouths of rivers or canals of Mars with accuracy, and we can anticipate what district will appear in the face of the planet, from the length of the rotation of the planet is known to the hundredth part of a second. As the planet turns upon its axis more slowly than ours, the calendar of the inhabitants of Mars is composed of two consecutive years of 668 days and a bi-sexile one of 669 days.

It is not many years since Mars entered into the sphere of our observation. And one can also say that there is but a small number of the inhabitants of this world who have observed it in all its details, and of these the most experienced is Signor Schiaparelli, director of the observatory at Milan. The geographical map of the planet Mars has just been made with infinite care by the above mentioned astronomer. One might really consider it a terrestrial sphere of continents, islands, coasts, peninsulas, gulfs, waters. Moreover, clouds, rains, inundations, snows, seasons, winters and summers, springs and autumns prevail as they do here, and the intensity of the seasons is absolutely the same as with us, the inclination of the axis being the same as ours.

Our problem of the habitability of the stars is limited to observing the celestial bodies upon which the conditions are such that organized matter can exist in a durable form.

In the planet Mars the density of a cubic meter of water, earth or any matter is only the seven-hundredth of what it is here, and the weight is only thirty-eight one-hundredths. A kilogram transported to Mars would therefore only weigh 376 grams there, and a man or woman weighing seventy kilos would only weigh twenty-six there. The years are nearly twice as long as upon our planet, and the climatological conditions seem much more favorable than they are here.

The conditions necessary to life are, we know, multifarious, as the structure of the organic matter is so complicated. —Camille Flammarion in Harper's Magazine.

The "Plague of Women."

When the war between Japan and Russia broke out the Japanese government did not desire the assistance of foreign nurses.

A certain number of American nurses went to Japan. They were received with courtesy and compliments by the police officials at Tokyo. But the New York Medical Record says that "the medical department of the Japanese army has been frightfully embarrassed by their attentions." It declares that their ignorance of the Japanese language and their inability to eat Japanese food or to live in Japanese style have proved an almost complete bar to their usefulness.

The London Hospital unfeelingly remarks, "Nurses should show more discipline when wars occur, or they may come to be classed with the 'plague of women' type."

Raising Trout Crops.

There ought to have been more than a suggestion to some farmers with an available water supply at hand in the tank containing trout six months, one two and three years old, shown by Lewis Johnson & Son of West Brattleboro, Vt., at the Valley fair. The three-year-olds weighed two pounds apiece, and at market value they are worth $1.50 each in season. Mr. Johnson claims that he is making more from the sale of his trout each year than many a farmer gets from his entire establishment. Some raisers insist that trout can be put on the market for "the price of pork."

Japanese Army Rations.

The main dependence of the Japanese troops in the field is rice compressed into balls about the size of one's two fists for the sake of making it more portable, the instrument used for the purpose somewhat resembling a lemon squeezer. Before being converted into this shape the rice is cooked, so that in case of emergency it may be eaten without further preparation. But ordinarily the balls are either cut in slices or roasted or else dropped whole into the pot, when in the process of boiling they expand greatly.

Recalling a Councilman.

Councilman J. P. Davenport of Los Angeles recently was removed from office under what is known as the "recall" feature of the city charter. His successor was chosen at a special election. The charter gives the electors of a ward the right to "recall" a councilman who has acted contrary to their interests. Upon the presentation of a petition to the city clerk having the signatures of 40 per cent of the bona fide voters of the ward the council must then order a special election.

Yankee Bluejackets in London.

London is much impressed by the absolutely new type of Yankee bluejackets seen in her streets, Westminster abbey, the Tower and other places lately. They were sailors from Admiral Jewell's fleet on shore leave. Handsome, tidy, well set up fellows going about with bandoliers in their hands, looking up the historic "points of interest," they have delighted Englishmen by their intelligence and singular use of their privileges.

LOYALTY OF JAPANESE

Readiness of the Soldiers to Die For Their Country.

DISDAIN OF DEATH NOT THE CAUSE

Baron Suymatsu Says Japan's Fighters Value Life as Highly as Any Soldiers, but They Have Always Been Taught That Duty and Honor Demand Their Readiness to Sacrifice Life in Times of Peril.

Baron K. Suymatsu, Japan's foremost statesman and financier, tells in the New York American why the Japanese soldier is ever ready to lay down his life for his country.

Why is the love of country so strong in the Japanese? How is it that he who knows how to fight and does fight like a lion in battle is capable of expressing the tenderest sentiments? What is the moral code of Japan? Why is it that the Japanese soldiers do not seem to care for their lives at all, but attack their enemy with a reckless daring which surpasses that of any other soldier? Is it his religion which teaches him contempt of death?

These are questions which I am asked to answer every day, and I shall in these lines try to lay clear to my readers the main traits of the character of the Japanese.

First of all I owe it to my countrymen, who are fighting so bravely against the armies of the czar, to state emphatically that it is not contempt of death taught by Buddhism which makes them ready to lay down their lives for their country at any time.

The principles of Japanese ethics are nowhere better expressed than in an imperial decree which in 1890 was sent to all Japanese schoolteachers. The mikado in this calls the attention of the teachers to the fact that the rules which he gives in the official decree are the very same which his ancestors for centuries tried to implant in their subjects, which have been recognized as the fundamental principles of ethics in Japan for many generations. The most important paragraph of this imperial decree reads:

It is our wish that you, our loyal subjects, at all times honor and obey your parents and love your brothers and sisters. Man and wife should live together in peace and love. Be faithful to your friend. Practice self sacrifice and self possession.

Be just and honest in all your dealings. Be merciful. Do what you can to help science and education. Be peace loving. Educate your minds and try to reach perfection in everything.

Always think of the commonweal and spread light among your neighbors by good deeds. Watch over the constitution of the country and obey its laws.

Be ready to sacrifice all, your life, your property, when danger threatens your country. Always remember that you owe your country everything and that you should exert all your influence to further its interests.

In giving these rules the mikado solemnly promised to keep them himself and made the same promise for his successor.

This decree of the mikado is read to the children in all the schools of Japan on the three great national holidays, Jan. 1, Feb. 11 and the mikado's birthday.

Religion is not taught in the Japanese public schools, as the instruction of it has always been left to the parents, but every child must attend the public schools regularly and is only excused in cases when it is absolutely necessary, and how strictly this is adhered to is proved by the statistics from 1901 to 1902, which show that during that year 5,600,926 children (3,117,486 boys and 2,543,440 girls) attended the public schools regularly, while the total number of children who for some reason or other did not attend was only 51,846.

It is the young men who have been educated in these schools who are now fighting in Manchuria, and it is absolutely unjust to speak of them, as has often been done in both the European and American press, as fanatical barbarians. It is also a great mistake to think that they do not value their lives at all.

The Japanese soldier values his life as highly as the soldier of any other nation, but he would never think of hesitating when asked to sacrifice it for his country or emperor, because he has always been taught that duty and honor demands that he be ready to sacrifice it when his country is in danger.

Special rules are laid down for the education of soldiers and sailors in an imperial decree issued in 1882, which reads in part:

Know, therefore, soldiers, that we are your supreme war lord. You are our arms and legs, and you must guard your sovereign as you guard your heads and necks. Only in this manner can the right understanding between us exist. Whether we shall be able to protect and guard our empire and prove ourselves worthy of the blessings of heaven and the glorious deeds of our ancestors depends upon whether you fulfill your duties as soldiers. If our glorious empire should crumble into dust the disgrace will be yours. But if you preserve the warlike spirit among yourselves then we will divide the honors with you. If you fulfill your duties and use all your force for the preservation of our empire then our people shall always enjoy all the blessings of peace, and the sun of our empire shall become the light of the world. We have full confidence in you. Our soldiers and sailors shall now give you further general orders.

Then follows a number of rules concerning the duties of a soldier, and the men are instructed to be loyal, brave, faithful, obedient and temperate. Both officers and soldiers are taught this decree until they know it by heart.

These lines will, I hope, serve to explain many things concerning our soldiers which have not heretofore been understood. To be a soldier or a sailor in our navy means, of course, to be prepared for all sorts of hardships, and all our men are fully satisfied with their lot under all circumstances, and their only desire is to do their full duty.

Before I close I should like to say a few words concerning our patriotism. The word patriotism recalls immediately to the mind of every Japanese three words—emperor, dynasty and nation—and these three are absolutely inseparable and combined represent the highest idea which he can conceive. Between the people and its ruler is the most perfect understanding, and this is not strange when it is remembered that the dynasty in Japan has never changed.

Civil wars, the curse of so many other nations, are unknown in our history. There have of course been smaller disagreements and misunderstandings, but these have always been insignificant and have soon disappeared.

Our race has always remained pure, and we have never intermarried with foreigners. Only few of our people have emigrated, and all our ancestors are buried among us, with the only exception of the warriors who have fallen in foreign countries or the very few who have died while traveling abroad.

Furthermore, we have never suffered from invasions of foreign enemies. One great invasion which was planned by the Mongols in the thirteenth century failed very much in the same manner as Philip's attempt to conquer Great Britain with his "grand armada."

For all these reasons the heart of every Japanese fills with pride as soon as his country is mentioned. And therefore, not because he does not value his own life, is he ever ready to die like a hero on the battlefield and attempt even the impossible.

RAILWAY EXHIBITION.

Display of Appliances Planned For International Congress.

The greatest exhibition of American railway appliances and equipment that has ever been made is to be prepared for the delegates to the international railway congress, which meets in Washington next May, says the Chicago Record-Herald.

The congress will be entertained by the American Railway association, of which Stuyvesant Fish, president of the Illinois Central, is the head. The railway exposition will be an open air affair, held on the White House lot, or government reserve, between the White House and the Washington monument. Application has been made by the officials of the American Railway association for permission to use this vacant green for the purpose of installing the exhibits. Committees have been appointed to gather and arrange the exhibits, and the general managers of all big systems have pledged themselves to do their best to make the display a complete one.

Railway appliance manufacturers also are to be asked to exhibit, and it is the purpose to show foreign delegates the exact progress that has been made in railroading during the last fifty years and give them ocular demonstration of the methods, appliances and equipment used on American systems.

It also is being arranged to take the delegates on two trips, a long one and a short one. Special trains will run from Washington to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, stopping en route at Alton and Pittsburgh. Other trains will make the same tour, but will extend it to Chicago and possibly other cities, returning by way of New York or Boston.

FLOCK OF WILD PIGEONS.

Birds Seen at Chardon, O., After an Absence of Many Years.

A flock of fully 500 wild pigeons passed over Chardon, O., the other afternoon, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Hundreds of people who are familiar with the markings of the wild pigeon witnessed the sight. The flock was also seen at Aquila lake. The re-appearance of these birds after an absence of twenty-three years has caused considerable speculation among the sportsmen of Chardon. Wild pigeons were last seen near Chardon in April, 1883.

The last great flight of these birds in northern Ohio was witnessed in the spring of 1876. The pigeons reappeared in the spring of 1877, but in greatly diminished numbers. Their total disappearance later caused the belief to become general that the birds had been annihilated by market hunters. For years the Smithsonian institute has had a standing offer of $1,000 for a single specimen of the American wild pigeon.

RATE WAR

Between Transatlantic Steamship Companies is Now a Thing of the Past.

Berlin, Nov. 14.—The rate war between the transatlantic steamship companies over the third-class rates, originating with the Cunard company's invasion of Hungarian territory, is now a thing of the past, a two days' conference at which all the leading companies were represented having resulted in a treaty of peace. The exact terms of the agreement, which are subject to ratification by the Hungarian government, have not been made public, but it is stated that the Cunard company will join the association of continental lines, so far as continental traffic is concerned.

Baron D'Estournelles de Constant, in thanking the electors, declared that his election was a striking approbation of the new policy of union and peace promoted by mutual concessions between nations.

JAPANESE

Prince Now in Washington Is to Call Upon the President—Double Purpose of the Visit.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Prince Sadanaru Fushimi, who arrived in Washington from Japan, visits this country by order of the emperor with a double purpose. First to deliver to the president of the United States a special message of good will from the emperor of Japan, and second to visit the world's fair at St. Louis, where Japan has a large exhibit. While in Washington the president has designated Mr. Peirce, third assistant secretary of state, as his personal representative to attend upon the prince and arrange for his entertainment. Mr. Peirce will be assisted by Colonel Symons, and already several functions have been planned, including a dinner at the White House, a visit to the Capitol and congressional library, a lunch by the secretary of state, a reception by the prince to the gentlemen of the diplomatic corps at the Arlington hotel, a trip to Mount Vernon, and a dinner by the Japanese legation.

Alaskan Telegraph System.

Washington, Nov. 14.—General A. W. Greeley, chief signal officer of the United States army, in his annual report gives an interesting account of the work performed by his corps in establishing an all-American telegraphic system in Alaska. The cables used in the Alaskan system would reach from Newfoundland to Ireland and the land lines from Washington to Texas, being 2,079 miles of cable and 1,439 miles of land lines and 107 miles of wireless lines. General Greeley says the United States has brought southeastern Alaska, the Yukon valley and the Bering straits region into telegraphic communication with the rest of the civilized world.

Carlisle in Kentucky.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 14.—John G. Carlisle arrived in this city from Washington. He comes to Kentucky to appear as counsel for the Boree college in the trial on an indictment for co-racial education. At the last session of the Kentucky legislature an act known as the Day bill, prohibiting co-racial education, was passed. The present action is only against the institution, and not serve to test the constitutionality of the act.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 14.—The official returns from all the counties gives Roosevelt a plurality of 92,871. The total Republican vote was 268,226; Democratic, 155,355. Two years ago the vote for the Republican state ticket was 298,512; Democratic, 262,555. The falling off on the Democratic vote is all the more remarkable as the size of the Republican plurality.

GRETNIA GREEN IN BELFRY.

Pastor's Attachment to His Apartments in Chicago Church Tower.

A Gretnia Green at the pinnacle of a "vertical flat" with roof garden attachment for lovers, balmy breezes and perpetual moonlight, will be henceforth operated in the belfry and other floors of the tower of the First Congregational church of South Chicago by the pastor, the Rev. George A. Bird, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

Since the recent secret wedding there of eighteen-year-old Lydia Nusham to Robert Gray has shown how a bridal couple can elude even the most vigilant rice and old shoe throwers the preacher has determined to make the most of his peculiar block and will use it as the headquarters for those who seek to imitate that happy couple.

"I built this church tower for many reasons," said the Rev. Mr. Bird the other night to a visitor. "I believe in making things attractive for those who contemplate marriage. I have noticed that church towers are usually useless and chiefly occupied by dust, owls and rats. That is not in keeping with my ideas. I built this as a memorial to my departed wife. I have it arranged like a flat. The only difference is that one room is above the other instead of being horizontally arranged. It is a 'vertical flat.'"

"Marriages are made in heaven, they say, and this is as close to it as we can get until Santos-Dumont perfects safe airships."

"No, there is nothing irregular about a marriage in a steeple. Why should there be? It is part and parcel of the sacred structure. The two staircases are handy. The couples can come up on one side single and go down on the other side married. Thus there is no confusion or unnecessary spilling of rice."

The Rev. Mr. Bird has installed a telephone, and when the weather permits the roof garden will be in full operation.

GYMNASIUM DANCES.

Social Diversion Introduced by Mrs. George Westinghouse.

Gymnasium dances are expected to supply a novelty this season, says the New York Press. They have been "featured" successfully in Lenox by Mrs. George Westinghouse in her country home, Erskine park. As the name implies, the dance is held in the gymnasium, which in the rural homes of millionaires is no small source of worry to the architect. Such a room must be substantial enough for practical use and convenient to the sleeping apartments, yet so situated as not to interfere with the quieter life of the family.

It is the excellent arrangement of the gymnasium at Erskine park, in a separate building, that makes Mrs. Westinghouse's new dance popular. She and her husband recently gave a dinner and dance to mark the return of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Henry Delafield from a wedding trip. All the paraphernalia of gymnastics remained in the big hall, but American beauties were twined about the French foils on the walls, and great clusters of chrysanthemums were massed among the boxing gloves, dumb bells and Indian clubs. Festoons of flowers decked the trapezes, horizontal bars and traveling rings.

Supper for the small party was served on a giant springboard. The only casualty occurred when one of the butler's assistants, with a heavy loaded tray, tripped over a medicine ball. Mrs. Spencer is to give a similar dance next month in the gymnasium of her country house in Scarborough.

Japanese as Farmers.

The Japanese have surprised the world as fighters, but, according to Harold Bole, they are also the most remarkable agricultural nation in the world, says the London Globe. They have only 10,000 square miles of arable land. An automobile going fifty miles an hour could skirt this area in eleven hours. Yet it supports an imperial nation—the rising power of the far east. Experts admit that the scientific skill of Japanese agriculturists is unsurpassable. "Patient diligence, with knowledge of the chemistry of the soil and the physiology of plants, has yielded results that have astounded the most advanced agriculturists in western nations."

General Oyama an Excellent Judge.

When Field Marshal Oyama, chief of the Japanese general staff, was judge advocate he attended a ball at Tokyo one night, says the London Mirror. He was standing near a doorway when a beautiful European woman swept by, and so greatly did her charms impress Judge Oyama that he exclaimed involuntarily, "What a lovely woman!" She overheard him. With a little smile, she looked back over her shoulder and, recognizing him, said, "What an excellent judge!"

Capture of Big Game in Arizona.

Al Houshman returned recently from the Huachuclas in Arizona. He brought back the biggest black bear India ever saw, the prettiest wildcat, two big muskrat yellow rattlesnakes and the beautiful skin of a peculiar kind of kirz snake, says the Tombstone (Ariz.) Epitaph. Al will make rugs of the "varmint" skins, a band of the snakeskin and pets of the rattlesnakes.

Buddhist Missionaries in Jap. Army.

In every division of the Japanese army a number of Buddhist missionaries are preaching the noble gospel of their master, says the Light of Bharma. Among the naval stations and squadrons many Buddhists have also been working. Since the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war more missionaries have been sent to the front to assist in this work than were formerly connected with army and navy.

RESCUE OF FAIRBANKS

How Indiana Senator's Life Was Saved In His Boyhood.

HE WAS DROWNING IN A CREEK.

Episode In Union County, O., When Dr. E. C. Robinson of Plain City Rescued the Senator When They Were Schoolboys Together—Old Time Anecdotes Told About the Indian.

Forty years ago when the two were schoolmates in Darby township, Union county, O., Dr. E. C. Robinson of Plain City, O., saved the life of Senator Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana by pulling him out of Darby creek, where they were swimming, says the Columbus (O.) State Journal.

Both boys grew into young manhood intimate friends, and the friendship is still unbroken. Some two months ago, when the Union county home coming drew hundreds of former residents to Marysville, Robinson and Fairbanks met for the first time in years. Though necessarily brief, their meeting was brimful of gladness. Robinson in discussing the rescue recently said:

"As a boy he was a model—slight, fair and curly haired. For all that, he was full of life, and in foot racing and the old style games of ball he beat all of us. Then a great game was built up, four boys within a rectangle and four on the corner bases. The fellows on the corners were permitted to 'burn' those on the inside with the ball so long as they didn't miss. Charley could throw like a shot, and there was always a bustle when it came to choosing up to get him. His appearance was deceptive in the extreme, and he was game to the core."

"The afternoon I saved his life we went swimming, he, I and Henry Morton, a cousin of mine. The pool was pretty deep in places, and Charley, in wading, stepped into what we called an offset. He went in over his depth and came up sputtering and blowing like a porpoise. He had gone down a couple of times before I got where I could get my fingers into his long yellow hair and pull him ashore."

"When he got so he could speak his first exclamation was, 'Please don't tell mother.'"

"Then he promised me a dozen apples and made the same offer to my cousin. We finally agreed and didn't tell of it for months. He wouldn't admit that he couldn't swim, but insisted on going in again and proving that he could. Moreover, he surprised us both by swimming the creek."

"Why didn't you swim the first time?" I asked him.

"I couldn't get started," he replied. "The water went down the wrong way."

"After that I never knew him to have trouble in keeping afloat. Before the summer had ended he swam like a duck."

"Charley began his strenuous life very early. When he was three years old his father began building a new house. One day while his mother was away at a neighbor's and the men were busy with the new house Charley fired the old one. The workmen had left a lot of shavings against the kitchen walls, and the youngster threw a blazing brand from the open fireplace among them. The house burned down, but most of the furniture was saved. This was the log cabin in which he was born."

"We both lived in Darby township, about three miles apart, and the schoolhouse was midway between. Both of us walked the mile and a half to school twice a day. Frequently on Saturdays we would visit each other. Squirrels were plentiful in those days, and I used to trap lots of them. Charley didn't know how, or at least didn't make a success of the sport. One day he begged me to trap him a squirrel. We landed one alone in the afternoon just before he was ready to start home. I was carrying it so that it couldn't bite, but he insisted upon my letting him have it."

"Better let me carry it until we get home, so I can put it in a box for you," I told him, but he wouldn't have it. He wanted to carry it whether or not. Finally I let him have it. He hadn't gone fifty feet before he dropped the squirrel, with a squeal of pain. It had bitten him through the thumb. We finally caught another one, and this he consented to take home in a box."

"After his graduation from the Ohio Wesleyan university Charley remained in Union county only a short time. In that brief stay, however, he took his first interest in politics. It wasn't a howling success. I remember very distinctly along about the middle of the seventies that there was a fight on in the county convention for the nomination for sheriff. Darby township had a candidate whom Fairbanks warmly supported. When the convention rolled around the man who was to have placed our candidate in nomination was ill, and we were left in the lurch. It finally devolved upon young Fairbanks to make the speech."

"He was a tall, not ungainly, but very red faced and bashful youth, and his confusion was painful when he arose to make his speech. In the middle of it he floundered hopelessly and finally named his man in a desperate effort and sat down. His candidate lost, but the incident spurred Fairbanks to greater effort. He set about organizing a literary debating society and in this cultivated self possession and oratorical ability. Before he left to study law he was easily the best speaker in our section of the county and had already begun to give promise of the ability that has marked his later career."

NAGGING PAINS

Newport News, Va., July 22, 1903.

Last summer while recovering from illness of fever, I had a severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism in the knees, from which I was unable to leave my room for several months. I was treated by two doctors and also tried different kinds of liniments and medicines which seemed to relieve me from pain for awhile, but at the same time I was not any nearer getting well. One day while reading a paper I saw an advertisement of S. S. S. for Rheumatism. I decided to give it a trial, which I did at once. After I had taken three bottles I felt a great deal better, and I still continued to take it regularly until I was entirely cured. I now feel better than for years, and I cheerfully recommend S. S. S. to any one suffering from Rheumatism.

WITH PRAYER ON LIPS

Jacob D. Hutson, Former Newark Resident, Died in Church at Zanesville Sunday--Mass Said Over Him While Regular Service Was Not Interrupted--Burial at Newark.

With a prayer on his lips, Jacob Daniel Hutson, a former resident of Newark, who has two daughters and one son living in this city, died Sunday morning in St. Thomas church at Zanesville.

For many years Mr. Hutson was the efficient foreman of the B. & O. shops here. The news of his sudden death was received with expressions of deep regret by many Newark friends. The following from Zanesville gives the details of Mr. Hutson's death.

Death, sudden and without warning, came at 11 o'clock Sunday morning to Jacob Daniel Hutson, of North Fourth street, while he was offering up prayer during his devotions in St. Thomas church on North Fifth street. Heart trouble was the cause.

When Mr. Hutson, who was seated in the rear of the church, fell over suddenly, a small crowd of worshippers gathered quickly around him. One went hastily into the parsonage next door and brought Father Shields to the stricken man's side, while another went for Dr. E. C. Rust.

The mass for the dying man was said over Mr. Hutson by Father Shields. In the front part of the vast church where the communion had gone unnoticed, Father E. J. Farmer, the pastor, continued chanting a mass, the worshippers in front not knowing until afterward that a soul had been waited to heaven, while they were offering their hosannas to the Creator.

The sudden ending of Mr. Hutson, who was one of the most prominent members of the congregation, was a great shock. None of his family was in the church, they having attended early mass. The father, who had been ill at times of heart trouble, went later in the morning.

Several of the worshippers lifted the body tenderly and carried the mortal remains into the parsonage, arriving there at the time Mr. Brush came. Life, however, was extinct. In a few minutes the body was taken to the home of Mr. Hutson's daughter Mrs. Margaret English, on North Fourth street.

When Mr. Hutson left the English home, he was feeling in good health and spirits, and when he was carried back a corpse the grief of the children was heartrending. At various times Mr. Hutson had complained of a pain in the heart region. He received treatment now and then for the disease, but at no time was his condition thought to be serious.

When Mr. Hutson was walking up North street to the church, he remarked to an acquaintance that he was feeling better than he had for some time, and from this it will be seen that he knew not that the death angel was to visit him so suddenly.

Jacob Daniel Hutson was once one of the most prominent men employed by the B. & O. railroad company. For years he was at the head of the shops in Chicago. When the shops were started up in Newark many years ago, he was taken from Chicago to Newark, to take the position of general foreman of the Newark shops. From this it will be seen that he was held in high esteem by the head officials of the railroad.

Mr. Hutson held this position in Newark for over 20 years, when he was deposed as a result of jealousy between the officials of the Chicago and Newark divisions. A short time later, when the true reasons for the deposition became known he was reinstated and was foreman in Newark until 11 years ago, when he came to this city to be general foreman of the local shops. About six years ago he left the employ of the B. & O. and was made general foreman of the Bellaire, Zanesville & Cincinnati shops, in this city. About a month ago he retired from active life on account of heart trouble.

Mr. Hutson was in his 63d year and was born in Hagerstown, Md. He came west when he was a lad and worked his way to the top in railroad circles. His wife died about three years ago, and there are five children, two sons and three daughters, left to mourn his death. They are Mrs. Jas. Dublin of Newark, Mrs. O. K. Wheeler of Newark, William Hutson of Newark, Robert Hutson of Zanesville, and Mrs. Margaret English, also of Zanesville. There is also one brother, Joshua Hutson of Pittsburg.

The funeral services over the remains of the deceased will be held at St. Thomas' church, Zanesville, Tuesday morning at 10:30, after which the body will be brought to Newark, accompanied by a large number of railroad men of Zanesville, and will be interred in Mt. Calvary cemetery. At the grave the casket will be opened and the friends will be given an opportunity of gazing on the face of their friend for the last time.

FALSEHOODS

Told So That he Could Give His Wife a Costly Burial, and He Goes to Prison.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 14—Because he made false statements in order to bury his wife in a costly manner, C. P. Wright, formerly a prosperous citizen of Atlanta, has been sentenced to the penitentiary for 12 months.

Mrs. Wright died in February and Wright gave the funeral order to Swift & Hall, ordering them to spare no expense and stating that the Real Men, of which he was a member, would pay the bill. The undertakers interred Mrs. Wright in a costly fashion but when the bill was presented to the Real Men payment was refused, the statement being made that Wright was not a member in good standing. A movement is on foot to pay the undertakers and secure a remission of Mr. Wright's sentence.

CARP

ARE NOW BEING REMOVED FROM BUCKEYE LAKE.

Nearly Twenty Tons Have Been Taken From the Fox River, Near Chicago, Ill.

As noted in The Advocate recently, the state has made a contract with a Cleveland firm for the removal of carp from Buckeye Lake. This firm has been engaged at the lake and is paying $2 a ton for carp, which are smoked and shipped to the eastern market.

Feeding beds are established, quantities of wheat and corn being thrown into the water to attract the carp which are then caught with nets. An inspector is present to see that all fish save the carp are returned to the water.

The men are now at work in the vicinity of Summerland Beach.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—In two days' fishing nearly 20 tons of German carp have been taken with seines from the Fox river.

This work was done under the supervision of the State Fish Warden and is still in progress.

All the rock bass and other protected fish caught, are released. The carp are loaded into specially prepared chests filled with water and in their live state transported to Chicago. They are sold alive to the residents of the Chetco.

The war on the German carp is due to the fish's depredations upon the eggs of game fish.

IN GRANVILLE

Prof. Rauschenbusch Will Deliver Several Addresses to the Students of Denison.

Zanesville, Nov. 14—At the Sunday morning services of the German Presbyterian church, on South Seventh street, Prof. W. Rauschenbusch, of Rochester, N. Y., a professor in the Rochester theological seminary, delivered a powerful sermon in English on "All Saints' Day." The church was crowded with a congregation that was greatly entertained by the sermon.

Prof. Rauschenbusch is en route home from Louisville, Ky., where he attended the Baptist congress, which was held there last week. He is an old college chum of Rev. H. Kamphausen, the pastor of the church, and stopped over to see him. The two had not met for 21 years and the reunion was an enjoyable one.

Prof. Rauschenbusch left last evening for Granville, where he will deliver several addresses to the students of Denison university.

Don't miss "When the Bell Tolls," the beautiful melodrama at the Auditorium tonight.

Similar work has been done in the Peabody buildings in London and in various extensive enterprises of the sort in a number of leading cities.
